Seeks to Prevent Drilling of Wells at Random.

ILLINOIS FIELD IS STUDIED

Geological Survey Tells Where In Southwestern Illinois It Seems Probable Oil or Gas May Be Found.

Washington, Nov. 14.-The government has gone into the business of furnishing "tips."

The United States geological survey has issued a statement headed "Geological Survey Gives Oil Tips." The statement added that the purpose of this tip to oil men and land owners is "to divert random wild catting from unpromising territory to explora tion in areas whose rock structure and other geological factors hold out greater promise for the occurrence of oil pools.

Discovery of the Carlyle, Ill., oll field last spring and the excitement attending it has aroused interest in oil and gas prospecting throughout the southwestern part of the state. An oil boom can be compared only to a gold rush. Many seasoned oil operators paid fabulous prices-ten, twen ty and even thirty thousand dollars each for leases on farms which were found to have no oil under them.

"Much money is even yet being spent in random drilling or wild catting far away from the producing territory, but most of such wells are unproductive and the money spent in getting the leases and in sinking the

"E. W. Shaw of the United States geological survey has been making a study of a 'arge part of Clinton, Washington and St. Clair counties and has discovered several districts in addition to that at Carlyle, in which at least the structure of the rocks is such as to favor the accumulation of oil and gas, whereas the remainder of the territory probably contains nothing but salt water.

"The following places have been selected as worthy of being tested for oil and gas: The vicinity of Darmstadt, northeast of Lensburg; about Marissa and extending for several miles toward Oakdale; between Nashville and Addieville; the vicinity of Hoffman; between Mascoutah and Okawville: between Trenton and Breese; in a belt extending from a few miles north to a few miles south of O'Fallon; the central part of Irishtown township, northeast of Carlyle; one to three miles northeast of Bar-
